

INDEX

TO

VOLUME LVIII.

Apologetics, Weak Points in, 382 ; the Resurrection, 383 ; the Incarnation and the Resurrection, 385 ; the Divinity of our Lord, 387 ; the risen Body, 389 ; the gradual glorification, 391 ; the early development, 393 ; the baptism, 395 ; the suppression of the Godhead, 397 ; the Redeemer's sinlessness, 399 ; the Son of Man, 401 ; the sanctification of our Lord, 403 ; the personality of Jesus, 405 ; the temptation of our Lord, 407 ; the true order, 409.

'Carey,' Culross's, 222.

'Caroline Fox, Journals and Letters of,' 322 ; the Fox family, 323 ; J. S. Mill "unbending," 325 ; visitors at Penjerrick, 327 ; Sterling on men and things, 329 ; Thomas Carlyle, 331 ; estimate of his power, 333 ; Carlyle at Mentone, 335 ; smaller celebrities, 337 ; Quakerism, past and present, 339 ; Tennyson in Cornwall, 341 ; Barclay Fox and W. E. Forster, 343 ; Miss Carne and the Crimean war, 345 ; her conversion, 347.

'Central Government,' Traill's, 237.

'Christian Ethics,' Martensen's, 495.

'Christ of Fiction, The, 349 ; 'Onesimus,' 351 ; the Ergastulum, 353 ; a note of warning, 355 ; the development of history, 357 ; flight from Colosse, 359 ; St. Paul, 361 ; misinterpretation of metaphor, 363 ; Dr. Abbott's principles, 365 ; the Resurrection and the Second Coming, 367 ; rationalistic theorising, 369 ; the Encyclopædia Britannica, 371 ; the Original Tradition, 373 ; the great itinerant preacher, 375 ; the veracity of St. Luke, 377 ; the Bread of Life, 379 ; the Christ of history, 381.

'Commentary on the New Testament,' 495.

'Count Campello,' 223.

'Cries in a Crisis,' 558.

'Crossley's National Budget,' Wilson's, 558.

Curiosities of Bible Manuscripts, 34 ; the Quarterly Review on Revision, 35 ; quarrel with the great uncials, 37 ; curiosities of writing, 39 ; notes at the end of MSS., 41 ; Curzon's visits to monasteries, 43 ; scene in a Coptic monastery, 45 ; escort of robbers, 47 ; search for manuscripts, 49 ; seclusion of Greek monasteries, 51 ; a great textual critic, 53 ; Tischendorf discovers the Sinaitic MS., 55 ; Tischendorf, 57 ; our debt to these workers, 59.

'Dogmatics,' Schœberlein's, 500.

'East of Jordan,' Merrill's, 276.

'Electorate and the Legislature,' 237.

'English Men of Letters,' Walpole's, 539.

- 'English Policy,' Sergeant's, 226.
 'Epistles to Thessalonians,' Lünemann's, 495.
 'Epistles of Peter and Jude,' Huther's, 495.
 'Fifty Years of the House of Lords,' 252.
 'From Crecy to Assaye,' Clinton's, 273.
 'Great Problem,' The, 215.
 'Great Prophecies,' Pember's, 509.
 'Great Schoolmen of the Middle Ages,' Townsend's, 524.
 Greek Testament, The New Text of the, 466; general reception of the Revised Version, 467; attack and defence, 469; principles of change, 471; mode of investigation, 473; genealogy of MSS., 475; late age of the Textus Receptus, 477; testimony of the Fathers, 479; internal evidence, 481; common-sense judgments, 483; studies of the eighteenth century, 485; Griesbach, 487; independence of the Revisers, 489; constitution of the company, 491; the Lord's Prayer, 493.
 Handel, 306; parentage, 307; early signs of genius, 309; in England, 311; troubles, 313; friends and foes, 315; the oratorios, 317; last days, 319; the proposed Conservatoire, 321.
 'Harmony of the Old and New Covenants,' 215.
 Heinrich Heine, Life and Works of, 411; early years, 413; education, 415; Hamburg, 417; Heine's life-passion, 419; the Von Enses in Berlin, 421; the lyrical intermezzo, 423; the travel-pictures, 425; Heine as a writer of prose, 427; Munich and art, 429; at Paris, 431; Heine as a French author, 433; marriage and mode of life, 435; the grave in Montmartre, 437.
 'Hibbert Lectures,' Kuenen's, 517.
 'History of Christian Doctrine,' Hagenbach's, 495.
 'Lady's Cruise in a French Man-of-War,' Cumming's, 258.
 'Lectures on the Epistle of Paul to the Romans,' Tyson's, 531.
 'Life of Napoleon III.,' Vol. IV., Jerrold's, 262.
 'Madame de Sévigné,' Ritchie's, 271.
 'Magyarland,' 551.
 'Making of England,' Green's, 540.
 'Martin Luther,' Treadwell's, 268.
 Methodism and the Working Classes, 60; characteristics of the working classes, 61; personal influence, 63; adaptation, 65; the Sunday-school, 67; what becomes of the children, 69; character of the teaching, 71; pastoral oversight, 73; practical suggestions, 75.
 'Meditations of Marcus Aurelius Antonius,' 503.
 'Meyer's Commentary on the Romans,' Godet's, 495.
 Newer Criticism on the Old Testament, The, 281; appeal to the public, 283; Scripture, Divine and human, 285; origin of the Pentateuch, 287; the Levitical worship, 289; Jewish law, 291; the Decalogue, 293; the local sanctuaries, 295; testimony of Isaiah, 297; priests and Levites, 299; significance of the Ark, 301; positive evidence, 303; the future of Biblical science, 305.
 'Non-miraculous Christianity,' Salmon's, 213.
 North-East Passage, 439; causes of Arctic research, 441; early career of Nordenskiöld, 443; plan of the expedition, 445; the start, 447; from Tromsøe to Chaborava, 449; the Kara sea, 451; unknown waters, 453; Cape Chelyuskin, 455; the mammoth finds, 457; the detention, 459; the Chukches and Menka, 461; the release, 463; results, 465.
 'Origin of English History,' Elton's, 540.
 'Poor Law,' Fowle's, 237.
 'Pulpit Commentary,' The, 502.
 'Pygmalion,' Woolner's, 253.
 Renan's Last Volume, 76; Old-Testament origin of Christianity, 77; Christianity a new religion, 79; M. Renan's next work, 81; Antonius and Aurelius, 83; character of Aurelius, 85; philosophy and Christianity, 87; philosophy and persecution, 89; enthusiasm for martyrdom, 91; the churches of Gaul, 93; slavery and Blandina, 95; martyrdom, 97; Celsus and Lucian,

- 99; Minucius Felix, 101; the end of heathenism, 103; Christianity complete in second century, 105; causes of success of Christianity, 107; the supernatural, 109; the future of Christianity, 111; M. Renan's work, 113.
- 'Report of the Œcumenical Conference,' 220.
- 'Revelation of the Risen Lord,' Westcott's, 529.
- 'Richard Cobden, The Life of,' 1; birth and training, 3; begins business, 5; foreign travel, 7; winter at Constantinople, 9; "literary excellence," 11; personal characteristics, 13; the future of Prussia, 15; itinerants and their perils, 17; expansion of views, 19; first speech in parliament, 21; his oratory, 23; success of the movement, 25; Peel's eulogium, 27; a long tour, 29; death of his only son, 31; peace, 33.
- 'Russian Empire,' Boulton's, 548.
- Scientific Superstition, 177; science and religion, 179; the modern Utopia, 181; Professor Huxley's last work, 183; a "complete theory of life," 185; morality and the nature of things, 187; a formula tested, 189; approximations to the grand ideal, 191; mediæval culture, 193; faults of mediævalism, 195; the "ancient dialecticians" and workers in science, 197; the superiority of the nineteenth century, 199; the corner-stones of the new temple, 201; from what quarry, 203; the quicksand, 205.
- 'Sermons,' Dr. Punshon's, 519.
- 'Sermons Preached before the Queen at Balmoral,' Campbell's, 533.
- 'Sketches from Venice,' Freeman's, 275.
- 'Sonnets of Three Centuries,' 534.
- 'State Trials in the Nineteenth Century,' Browne's, 555.
- 'Suicide,' Morselli's, 279.
- 'Summer Tour in Russia,' Gallenga's, 548.
- 'System of Christian Doctrine,' Dörner's, 495.
- 'Temple Sermons,' Vaughan's, 217.
- Thirlwall's Letters, 115; early promise, 117; letters to Candler, 119; university honours, 121; Schleiermacher's "St. Luke," 123; letters to Bunsen, 125; admission of Dissenters to Cambridge, 127; life at Kirkby Underdale, 129; the change to Abergwili palace, 131; work in his diocese, 133; his cats, 135; state of the Welsh Church, 137; views on ritualism, 139; love of scenery, 141; love of novels and stories, 143; his ecclesiastical type, 145; was he a Broad Churchman? 147; he would have made a good Bishop of London, 149.
- 'Three Witnesses,' Jenner's, 211.
- 'Treasures of the Talmud,' 217.
- 'Vedic Religion,' Macdonald's, 219.
- 'Wesleyan Revised Catechisms, The,' 504.
- Works of G. F. Watts, R.A., The, 150; what of his life? 151; tolerance of lay opinion, 153; too much literature in art, 155; mistakes, 157; "Psyche," "Love and Death," "Orpheus and Eurydice," 159; poetic pictures, 161; fitness of "Faery Queen" for art treatment, 163; "monumental art" and London climate, 165; pre-Raphaelitism, 167; Mr. Watts's pre-eminence, 169; portraits of poets, &c., 171; portraits of women and children, 173; power and wide scope of Mr. Watts's art, 175.